

LAST EDITION. THE BANISHED BOY.

Josie Shephard's Case a General West Side Topic.

Everybody Sides with the Grandmother Robbed of Her Boy.

Expressions from Neighbors and Friends Who Have Known the Old Lady Well—A General Hope for the Success of "The Evening World" in Restoring the Boy—The Mail-Carrier Says He Never Delivered an Aulic Letter to Mrs. Shephard.

As the time draws near for the rehearing of the case of little Josie Shephard, by the Indenting Committee of the New York Juvenile Asylum the interest of the public in the outcome of the case grows more and more intense. This is especially true of the neighborhood in which Mrs. Shephard, the grandmother, and Mr. Andrew Grant, who is going to adopt the boy if he can get him back, reside. It is the talk of the day in that part of the town.

"There is hardly an acquaintance of mine," said Mr. Grant to an EVENING WORLD reporter, "who does not speak of the case and congratulate me and my friend Mrs. Shephard that we have so strong and untiring a champion as THE EVENING WORLD to assist us in getting our rights, and express the conviction that with such powerful aid we will be sure to get back the boy. It's a great thing for us, and you may be sure that we appreciate it deeply."

"There is so much interest in the case around here that many people cannot get their EVENING WORLD nowadays, everybody is following the progress of the case so closely, and it is the same way all along up to Harlem, for I know many friends on the west side, and I know from what they tell me."

"I want to say, too, that if we get Josie back I am going to send him to school in the fall with my little boy Tommy. Everything is all arranged, and as it will be before that time. Poor Mrs. Shephard can hardly believe yet that she will see her grandchild again, and occasionally has fits of despondency even now. We do all we can to encourage her, and you may be sure that we will all be on hand on Monday night, when the committee meets, to furnish all the information that can be desired to show our ability to take care of the boy and bring him up properly."

Inquiry in the neighborhood showed that the interest taken in the case all over town was even stronger than had been suspected. Emanuel Steinberg, of 539 Tenth avenue, and one of the largest newsmen in the vicinity, said:

"I know the people around here are following the progress of the Shephard case very closely. No one could help being interested in it. I know myself, although I do not know any of the parties, and never heard of them before. People who come in here stop and talk it over, and watch anxiously for the developments."

"Only last night I went uptown to see some friends who live in One Hundred and Tenth street, and found them all discussing the case. I am sure I hope she will succeed, for she seems to have been treated most unkindly and cruelly."

Mrs. William Young, who lives at 517 West Thirty-eighth street, is an acquaintance of Mrs. Shephard and has known her for five years. She said: "I know Mrs. Shephard is a hard-working and sober woman, who has lots of friends about her who think it is a shame that she should be deprived of the child. She is not a bad woman, and I think why she should be told that her grandson cannot live where she can sometimes see him."

Mrs. Sick, the wife of a German shoemaker who lives at 519 West Third-street, said that Mrs. Shephard came to see her last night, and told her all about the case. "She seemed to feel very badly about it, and cried most of the time she was telling me the story. I know her well, and my little boy, who was born in New York, was a playmate and constant companion of Josie Shephard. It was very hard on the old lady to send away the child when he was sick, and she was expecting to see him again."

"I have known Mrs. Shephard only for a short time," said Mrs. Charlotte Van Pelt, of 418 Eleventh avenue, "but I have heard about the child she had up in the asylum. She visited it on the stormiest days last winter, in regular blizzard weather, in rain and snow, and always took him something nice. We all took an interest in the boy, and she always was expecting to see him again."

"I know the world of that boy," said Mrs. Schwartz, who keeps a grocery store at Thirty-ninth street and Eleventh avenue, "and she was working hard to bring him home and support him herself. Almost every one who comes in here has something to say of the case, and they all commend the energy with which THE EVENING WORLD has shown in

LAST EDITION. RIOTERS SHOT DOWN.

A Chowder-Party Tragedy in Long Island City.

One Man Killed and Another Mortally Wounded.

A Score of Drunken and Reckless Young Men Assaulted the Saloon-keepers of the Rioters with Fatal Effect—His Action Generally Commended—Four Arrests Made and Others Expected.

A drunken brawl and riot, which ended in probably a double murder, was enacted within the last ten hours by a chowder party gang in Long Island City.

The body of William Owens, twenty-four years of age, lies in Hannan's morgue as a result of the night's orgy, and his friend Conrad Welsh is lying at the point of death with a bullet in his side.

In the early part of the evening about twenty-five young men assembled at Marra's Prospect Garden, on Prospect street, Dutch Kills. Marra has no license, but sells liquor on the quiet. The young men in the neighborhood, most of whom are bricklayers, plumbers, painters, carpenters and other mechanics, were invited to participate in a chowder party at Marra's place.

The invitation was freely accepted, and about 9 o'clock more beer than chowder had been consumed. Soon after all the beer had been consumed the gang became very boisterous, and started to leave the Prospect Garden to visit the "Kills" again.

The first place the drunken mob attacked was the saloon of Thomas Hannan, corner of Crescent street and Wilber avenue, three blocks away. A disturbance was raised here, and the proprietor, who is a young man, for some time resisted the attack. He was finally overpowered, and his wife, who was with him, was ejected with much difficulty. Marston then assaulted Tierney, who had already been roughly handled in visiting Marra. The gang then went away, vowing vengeance.

The liquor saloon of William Capel on Crescent street, and not far from Tierney's, was next visited, and an attack made on the proprietor. The proprietor, who is a young man, for some time resisted the attack. He was finally overpowered, and his wife, who was with him, was ejected with much difficulty. Marston then assaulted Tierney, who had already been roughly handled in visiting Marra. The gang then went away, vowing vengeance.

Upon hearing the crash Tierney stepped out of the hallway, revolver in hand, and fired upon the mob. The mob, who were already in the act of leaving, turned back, and were shot in front of the saloon. The others of the gang were on the opposite side of the street.

The residents of the neighborhood had already been aroused, and upon hearing the noise made by the bombardment and pistol shots the whole neighborhood was aroused. Neighbors rushed to the aid of the mob, and the mob was finally dispersed. The mob was finally dispersed, and the mob was finally dispersed.

Welsh was still alive at noon, but it is thought that he will not recover. He is lying in the left side, the bullet taking an inward course. Welsh was still lying on a cot in Capel's saloon at noon.

Seit, Carroll, after the shooting spree, on complaint of Coroner Robinson, charged to the scene of the tragedy. Later, Sergeant Connelley and Constable Hannan, and after some difficulty the following persons were arrested and locked up on a charge of rioting: William Hannan, aged twenty-four, plumber; James Capel, aged twenty-one, and William Bailey, aged twenty-one, bricklayers.

Thomas Tierney, aged twenty-nine, of 88 Wilber avenue, saloon-keeper, was locked up on complaint of Coroner Robinson, charged with homicide. William Flanagan, who was with Tierney at the time of the shooting, and Mary Connelly, who is the sister-in-law of Tierney, and who was assaulted by Marston, were arrested and held as witnesses, as was also Dietrich F. Rieter.

The action of Tierney is generally applauded by the community. Owens, the dead man, who is married, leaves a wife but no children. He was a shiftless fellow, but worked occasionally in the Empire city yard in ship in Hannan's Point. He resided in Dutch Kills for many years, where his relatives now live.

Tierney boasts a good reputation. Capel and his wife some years ago were fined $300 for assaulting Officer Owen Kavanagh.

The police are out hunting for the remainder of the rioters, and it is expected that other arrests will be made before night.

Death Meets an Unknown Man. A south-bound train killed an unknown man, about thirty years old, near Key East, N. Y. He had $1 in money and two cigars, from the Star Theatre, of New York, in his pocket. A South-bound train, which has the largest Brooklyn circulation.

LAST EDITION. THERE MAY STILL BE HOPE.

THE PRAYER HAS BEEN FORWARDED TO THE GOVERNOR, AND AN ANSWER MAY BE EXPECTED—HOW THE THOUGHTS OF DEATH DEATH ENCEALED THE PRISONER—BUT SHE HAD A MORE CHEERFUL DAY YESTERDAY.

The prayer has been forwarded to the Governor, and an answer may be expected. How the thoughts of death encephaloid the prisoner—but she had a more cheerful day yesterday.

"The petition to Gov. Hill, asking for a commutation of Chiara Cignarella's sentence from the death penalty to imprisonment for life, has been sent, and we are expecting a decision every day now," said Lawyer Joe Moore to an EVENING WORLD reporter this morning.

"There was a long list of signatures to the petition, and among them were some pretty prominent names. A good deal of interest is felt in her case. Mr. Howe sent to Gov. Hill a petition for mercy, signed by the twelve jurors in her case, some time ago, and the Governor told him to exhaust legal measures first, then apply for pardon. The answer may come any day now, and, of course, the petitioners have high hopes that the executive clemency may intervene to rescue the woman from hanging."

Chiara Cignarella is the most interesting person, beyond all question, in the success of the petition. The shadow of death that hangs over her is prostrating the poor creature with the utmost dread. Like most Italians, she has a horror of death, and presented to her eyes in the form of strangulation on the gallows, it is frightful in contemplation.

She is wasting away with the terrible thought and is weak and languid. If she is hanged she will have to be carried off by a scaffold and held while the rope is adjusted around her neck. She has not nerve enough to face the dreadful ordeal with any courage.

The Fourth of July worried her. The constant popping off of firecrackers, with the occasional sharp crack of one of the kind that breaks back with a bang, and the loud jaded nerves and she was weaker and more nervous than usual.

She slept well, however, and yesterday felt herself as if she were more vigorous than she has for some days. Several people visited her and chatted cheerfully in a way to revive her spirits. Among them were Mrs. Alexander and Mrs. Collier, who have been so kind to her in her confinement. They left the sacred altar of Father Annetto, the confessor and spiritual adviser of Chiara, entered the little cell.

The priest, conversed with her dark-eyed penitent for an hour, and left her soothed and in a good frame of mind. Her appetite, too, although she doesn't eat enough for a healthy woman, is better. Another love letter is signed, "Sydney F. Smith."

Mr. Warner thinks there will be ray developments in the case before its conclusion. Justice Gorman ordered him to pay Reavey $3 a week for two weeks, when the case would be heard again.

Chiara does not speak often of the commutation of her sentence, although there is no doubt that she lies tossing on her iron bed she often thinks of the message which she has received from her friends, and she often thinks of the message which she has received from her friends, and she often thinks of the message which she has received from her friends.

Her little daughter has not been to see her for nearly a fortnight. The interviews with her husband and child are painful, though in some respects pleasant. "My poor child," Chiara will say over and over when her little girl visits her, passing her hand over her hair.

Barney Rourke's Association Is Going On Its Annual Outing. The friends and admirers of Barney Rourke, the Republican leader in the Eighth Assembly District, will have their outing on Monday next.

The annual excursion of the Bernard Rourke Association, which comprises Mr. Rourke's constituents of the Fifth, Sixth, Tenth and Fourteenth wards, will occur on that day, and it bids fair to excel all former excursions of the association in magnificence. The steamer Bay Queen, with the barges Republic, Caledonia, Geraldine and Merchant, have been chartered, and 10,000 people can find accommodation on this fleet.

John B. O'Brien, President of the association; George J. Krause, of the Volks Garden, and ex-Alderman Christian Goetz, are Vice-Presidents; John E. Brodsky, Financial Secretary; Alexander Jackson, Treasurer; Benson M. Levy, Recording Secretary.

James McMann is Chairman of the Committee of Arrangements, and among the members of the committee are Etienne Rayer, Martin J. Kirby, E. G. McCorr, W. J. O'Brien, C. Spillane, T. D. Sullivan, T. J. Donohue and S. J. Foley.

The fare for the excursion has been placed at $1. The boats will be well filled, and Prof. Bowdell's band of sixty pieces will make music for dancing on the barges and on Mount Pleasant Grove, opposite Yonkers, where the party will spend the day.

The fleet will leave from the foot of Market street at 8:30 in the morning, returning at 8:40 in the evening. Martin J. Kirby, of the Bowery Beer Creek, will cater to the hungry and thirsty, and a big time is anticipated.

Three Young Tramps and a Single Cent. William Gorman, aged sixteen, of No. 15 Bank street, Walter Taylor, aged eighteen, having no home, and George H. Sharp, aged fifteen, of 79 Bank street, totted it to Philadelphia and back last month.

Before going, they stole and sold for $3 a coat worth $38, belonging to Taylor's brother Albert, of 131 Eighth avenue.

The normal and sane have been arrested, and the former was held in $500 this morning at Jefferson Market.

Small-Pox at South Norwalk. There are seven cases of small-pox reported in the little town of South Norwalk, Conn. Yellow flags are displayed on the infected dwellings, and the authorities are taking measures to prevent a spread of the disease.

Another Case of Only. It was only a blacking-box and only a twelve-penny box, but it was the cause of a great deal of trouble. The former didn't belong to the latter and John was held in $500 bail at Jefferson Market for stealing the box.

Local News Condensed. Patrick McKeon, a seven-year-old boy, of 238 West Houston street, was run over by a horse and cart and his leg broken, in front of 376 Houston street.

John A. Rohr, aged thirty-three years, of 63 First street, fell from his car at a Thirtieth street car crossing, and injured his head seriously. He was removed to Bellevue.

Charles J. O'Brien, a fifteen-year-old boy, was run over by his aunt in Kenwick street, near Bridge. He is tall and stout, of light complexion and fair blue eyes. He wore a blue jacket, dark striped pants, blue cloth shirt and black shoes.

LAST EDITION. LITTLE PHIL PASSED BY.

HIS BOAT STEAMED UP EAST RIVER TO THE SOUND TO-DAY.

How Tenderly the Invalid Warrior Is Cared For on the Swatara—There Was No Salute to the Passing Vessel, and Every Sailor's Step Was as Light as Air—The Physicians' Bulletin.

The United States steamship Swatara, with Gen. Phil Sheridan on board, steamed up the East River, out through Hell Gate and into the Sound to-day, and will anchor off Newport this evening, going on to Nonquit, in Buzzard's Bay, to-morrow.

The Swatara arrived off Liberty Island at 8.10 last evening, and Gen. Sheridan, a number of officers from Governor's Island and A. S. Sprague, S. B. Barker, J. W. Doane and Judge Knickerbocker, of Chicago, with John Maginnis, jr., of New York, friends of the sick warrior, visited the vessel.

They were not allowed to see the General, but Mrs. Sheridan and the sick man's mother, Mrs. Leach, and the other women on board were allowed to see him. The voyage had not brought any unfavorable consequences.

Gen. Sheridan passed a good night, sleeping soundly and naturally for a great part of the night. His pulse and respiration are good and there is no return of any unfavorable symptoms.

Immediately after the issuing of the bulletin anchor was weighed, and the Swatara, with her crew of 300, resumed her voyage. No salute was fired for the passing Governor's Island, and on board the 300 sailors preserve a perfect quiet, conversing in whispers and moving about with noiseless tread.

The Eastern War Question. No Understanding Between Russia and Austria—Emperor William's Position. BY CABLE TO THE EVENING WORLD ASSOCIATION.

Vienna, July 7.—Well informed persons deny that any understanding exists between Austria and Russia on the Eastern question. Russia continues to send war material to the frontier and is constructing mills and bakeries around Warsaw, which has been transformed into a fortress of the first rank.

The Grand Duke Vladimir, in a speech delivered at a banquet given in Warsaw on the occasion of the inspection of the troops, said his stay in Berlin had convinced him that Emperor William was friendly disposed towards Russia, and was ready to become her ally.

Jersey City Jetties. No traces of missing Catherine Luckman have as yet been discovered by the police. She is the old lady who disappeared from her home, 439 Jersey avenue, on the night of May 30, while she was being taken to the hospital by a doctor.

Charles A. Travis, a Nova Scotia, captain of the British vessel, Don Robin, was held for trial by Justice Silsbee, this morning, on a charge of atrocious assault and battery on his cabin boy, Isaac Handly, whose home is in Liverpool.

The morning's freight train on the Pennsylvania Railroad at the Green street crossing was temporarily delayed by the wreck of a truck owned by the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, and the train was held up for some time.

The Mayor as a Railroad Magnate. Mayor Hewitt goes out every Saturday afternoon to his country home at Greenwood lake, where he remains until Monday. He has been on the Greenwood Lake Railroad, and lately he has spent over $100,000 in improving the road and putting on new parlor cars. Next week he will have a new car running from the depot in Jersey city.

A Woman's Confession. "Do you know, Mary, I once actually contemplated suicide?" "You better not, Mrs. E. I. I feel sure you would not. I believed myself the most unhappy woman in the world. I looked ten years older than I really was, and I felt that I was a burden to my family. I had experienced all those symptoms myself. Well, I was at the cemetery last night, from the commission of a deed which I shudder to think of. A friend advised me to take Dr. Fick's Favorite Prescription. I did so. In an hour or short time I felt like a new being. The prescription cured me, and I owe it to the doctor who gave it to me."

LAST EDITION. THE EVENING WORLD'S SPORTING EXTRAS.

A SPECIAL LEGISLATIVE SESSION. Gov. Hill Has Called One to Begin July 17. An extra session of the Legislature has been called by Gov. Hill for July 17.

The session is presumably called to arrange the matter of labor in the State prisons, the appropriations having been exhausted and the convicts thrown into idleness.

No paper printed in New York attempting to give the results of field events on the afternoon of their occurrence, ever approached THE EVENING WORLD's showing yesterday. There were two editions, one sent to press at the conclusion of the races at Brighton Beach and the other when the great ball game between the Brooklyn and St. Louis clubs, putting the former at the head of the Association, was finished.

The first edition was the only New York paper which printed the Brighton races complete, the Monmouth entries for the next day, the results of all Central and International League ball games, and gave any item of the probable result of the game at St. Louis.

The second or regular edition invites the following comparison:
